The Children's Courtyard Named Best Childcare

FORT WORTH, February 14, 2011 – The Children's Courtyard is pleased to announce that it has been named "Best Childcare Center That Takes Babies" by in the February 2011 issue of FortWorth Child and North Texas Child. This is part of their annual Best for Moms and Babies survey.

According to the magazines, at The Children's Courtyard, "The learning experience for your child starts on day one, so a childcare center that understands how babies learn is truly important. Here, curriculum includes an individualized lesson plan for each infant (starting as early as six weeks old) and intentional planning from teachers based on observation of students."

"We are honored that the families of Fort Worth and North Texas have recognized the premier early education and child care program that we provide at The Children's Courtyard ... even to our youngest students," said Jodi Johnson, regional vice president for the company. "We are committed to our families and children every day, and this recognition truly serves as a testament to all that we have to offer."

FortWorth Child and North Texas Child are award-winning, free monthly parenting magazines that address the concerns and needs of families, with a special focus on children from prenatal through adolescence. The magazines offer a well-informed, local and relevant perspective on issues affecting families and serve as both a strong voice in the community and a staunch advocate for children.
