The Children's Courtyard Introduces New Computer System for School-Agers

ARLINGTON, Texas, February 10, 2009 – The Children's Courtyard is pleased to announce that it has recently implemented new, state-of-the-art computer systems for its school-age children at its locations across Dallas / Fort Worth, Houston and Austin.

The new computers feature more than 50 educational programs that are continuously updated to keep each child stays actively engaged. In fact, The Children's Courtyard surveyed its students throughout the implementation process to ensure that the right decisions on software were being made. Each program is geared toward different ages, and even different genders. Programs include Jumpstart (Kindergarten through Grade 4), Mia Math, Reader Rabbit and much more!

"In today's technology world, it is important for children to be extremely comfortable using computers," said Sam Smith, manager of education for school-age programs at The Children's Courtyard. "So we are proud to incorporate learning with fun to help give our students a competitive advantage for the future."

The new computers don't only benefit the students, but the teachers as well. Each computer has the ability to "heal itself" without assistance from an Information Technology (IT) professional. This means that they have more time to focus on teaching than on fixing computer malfunctions.
